Senate Takes Action on Adjournment—The Day's Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 3.—The appearance of the Senate presented no unusual features this morning. The attendance was small, both of Senators and spectators.

Soon after the Senate met Mr. Cockrell, on the Committee on Appropriations, reported favorably the House concurrent resolution providing for the adjournment of Congress at 8 o'clock to-day and asked for its passage.

Mr. Berry of Arkansas thought it was the duty of Congress to remain in session.

Mr. Gray (Dem.) of Delaware said it was an attempt of zeal to continue the session till December.

Mr. Miller (Dem.) said it was his misfortune to disagree with nearly every body.

Mr. Blackburn (Dem.) of Kentucky favored the resolution and Mr. Peffer (Pop.) of Kansas opposed it.

The concurrent resolution was then passed.

AFTER THEM.

Mr. A. B. C. Collins Searching for a Pair of Elopers.

His Daughter Leaves Terre Haute With a Drug Clerk.

THE GIRL HAD KNOWN THE YOUNG MAN BUT THREE WEEKS.

Mr. Collins Thought the Pair Came to St. Louis, but Learns After His Arrival That Their Real Destination Was Chicago—How the Elopement Was Planned.

A. B. C. Collins, a wealthy contractor of Terre Haute, Ind., was in St. Louis to-day searching for his daughter, Gracie, who eloped last Saturday night with E. T. Beckwith, a young drug clerk. The anxious father was accompanied by J. W. Harris, a friend of the family. They called at the court-house to ascertain whether a marriage license had been issued to the couple and were told that no application for a license had been made.

Then Mr. Collins telegraphed to Chicago asking if a license had been issued there. No answer had been received up to 2 o'clock.

Mr. Collins is a member of the firm of Holmes & Collins, builders of the Indiana State Building at the World's Fair. As he is a man of means he gave his daughter a good education and she grew up to be an accomplished and attractive young lady. She is just 20 years of age, a fine musician, and was much sought after in society in Terre Haute.

FALL IN LOVE WITH BECKWITH. About six months ago the young drug clerk made his appearance in Terre Haute. He was penniless, but soon secured a position in a drug store within a half a block of the Collins residence. Miss Collins made his acquaintance by going to the store and he soon began to visit her at her home.

The young lady's parents disapproved of his advances from the first. The first time he was unguarded in his conversation and let fall the fact that his parents, who reside in Boston, had practically disowned him on account of his reckless conduct.

This fact, which he concealed from his family and Mr. Collins, forbade his daughter to associate with him. But the couple were not deterred by this. They met clandestinely and on last Saturday night while Mr. Collins was out, the young lady slipped away from her room and drove with her sweetheart to a station five miles north of Terre Haute, where they took the train for Chicago.

Mr. Collins and his friend Harris went to Chicago and learned that the couple had been married and it is supposed that they were married in the city of Chicago. Mr. Collins and his friend Harris went to Chicago and learned that the couple had been married and it is supposed that they were married in the city of Chicago.

THE FATHER'S ANXIETY. To-day's Dispatch reporter Mr. Collins said to-day that his object in searching for his daughter was merely to see that she had been legally married. "We have no objection to her marriage," he said, "because we know absolutely nothing about the young man. We were not favorably impressed by his manner, but we are not sure that he is not the kind of man we wanted for a son-in-law. I presume that they are married by this time, and I am sure that if they are, I am convinced that they will try to keep out of my way, as the young man is not a sure thing and I am sure that he will get when he meets me."

Mr. Collins has absolutely no clue as to where the young people are stopping in this city and he spent the day in telegraphing to Chicago for further information.

After Mr. Collins left, Mr. Harris, the Chief of Police and requested him to assist in the search for the couple.

TO KILL CLEVELAND.

No Truth in Report of Attempted Assassination by a Crank.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Private Secretary Thurston says there is no foundation whatever for the report that a crank attempted to assassinate President Cleveland to-day. The inquiry made by a reporter was the first that he or anyone connected with the White House had heard of the rumor. The police were also ignorant of any attempt upon the President's life and says the report is false.

A KANSAS CRANK.

Shooting and Climbing Night and Left Pursued by Officers.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 3.—George McConn, the escaped convict, who has been terrorizing the farmers of the country five miles north of this place for the past month, this morning went to the farm of his brother, John McConn, George attacked his brother with a club, knocking him senseless. He also shot a hanger, named White, in the leg. John's son came to the rescue and shot at his uncle, knocking his hat off and causing blood to flow from his head. The maniac fled to the woods and is now in hiding. Officers are in pursuit of him.

THREE CRANKS AT PITTSBURGH. PITTSBURGH, Nov. 3.—The police are having a hard time of it to-day with three cranks who took to the streets to-day and were locked up in the Central Station and the police are on the lookout for five others who have been writing threatening letters.

DEADLY BOMB.

London Startled by Revelations of a Dynamite Plot.

Ten-Pound Grenade and Cartridges Placed on Westminster Bridge.

An Explosion of the Powder Would Have Destroyed the Structure.

AND SHAKEN UP THE PARLIAMENT BUILDING NEAR BY.

The Packages Found by Thames Boatmen and Placed in the Hands of Scotland Yard Detectives—Police Officials Refuse to Give Out Information Concerning the Contents of the Bomb—The Rivermen's Statements.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—An afternoon paper startled London to-day with the report of the finding of a deadly dynamite bomb on the buttress of Westminster Bridge, which crosses the Thames near the Parliament Building. The bomb was taken possession of by the police and was conveyed to the Scotland Yard quarters of the metropolitan police.

Inquiries made at Scotland Yard by your correspondent confirmed the story. The inspector in charge admitted that the police were in possession of a piece of iron of conical shape, having the appearance of being a conical projectile for use in a gun, which is believed to be a bomb loaded with explosives.

The bomb was found on one of the buttresses, Westminster Bridge, Monday afternoon, on the side furthest from the House of Commons. The bomb was neatly wrapped in brown paper and tied with a stout cord.

From the position in which the bomb was found the police say that it was dropped onto the bridge by a passer-by. The Police Inspector added:

"However, though the parcel found is believed to be a bomb, it is no uncommon thing to find such suspicious articles in out of the way places and the conical-shaped looking piece of iron which is in possession of the police may not be a bomb and it may not contain dynamite or any other explosive."

In conclusion, the inspector said that the bomb had not been examined by experts in such matters, but it was perfectly safe, that the police were perfectly satisfied that the finding of the bomb was not the result of a dynamite plot to destroy the bridge or to injure the members of the House of Commons.

Additional inquiries made by the reporters of a number of London newspapers contradicted the reassuring reports given out by the Scotland Yard officials and seem to show that there has undoubtedly been an attempt to blow up that part of the bridge which is the site of the House of Commons.

Inquiries made at the Home Office confirm this last conclusion arrived at, but the general opinion was that the bomb was dropped by a person who was not a member of the House of Commons.

The following additional report, signed by the London Standard, was published to-day:

The following members of the present Grand Jury, after making an examination of the evidence, have decided to return a regular report, suggesting that in their judgment there should be no arrangement for the trial of the persons named in the report, as they have proper facilities for exercise outside the prison walls.

The following are the names of the persons named in the report: William Kelly, charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7; Daniel Bird, charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7; Harvey Bright, charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7; John Johnson, charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7; James Shields, charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7; Henry Thomson and John Bean.

Embarrassment—Max Morris. A man named Max Morris, who was charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7, was found to be in possession of a large quantity of dynamite and was charged with the murder of William Ferrell on Aug. 7.

TOM REED is mentioned as a "wily wolf." But Mr. Reed is not a wolf. He hasn't enough hair.

In the preliminary conflict over the revenue issue the Democrats were forced to compromise. This is a bad beginning.

THE worst thing that can be said about Grover Cleveland is that the Republican press is paying him too many compliments.

EVEN Gov. Penneyer of Oregon is getting letters from cranks, and Gov. Waite of Colorado may be persecuted at any moment.

THE Republican members of the House would show more respect to Mr. Reed's parliamentary theory by voting when their names are called.

THE one man in the Senate who has not only not lessened his fame by the long debate but has strengthened himself with the people is David B. Hill of New York.

CANDIDATE JACKSON has put into his Iowa campaign all the money he made as a pension attorney before he was disbarred. How can the Iowa voter avoid being touched by this great sacrifice?

IF the Hornblower nomination has to wait until Senator Hill toots his approval the nominee may never wear the Supreme gown. If the nomination is a good one it ought not to have to wait for anybody's tooting.

THE German chemists found trichine in American pork and they are now finding clover, camomile and new insects in American hay. Our German friends are very much too scientific for the building up of a great trade with the New World.

THE Democrats have prepared the way for a rational and healthy settlement of the money question. Now let them reconstruct the revenue system and reform the tariff before the 1st of May, as they can do if they will, and they will have nothing to fear in the elections of next year.

THE workmen of Chicago do not seem to share the opinion of certain clergymen that Mayor Harrison was a bad man, working evil. They have determined to build a monument to his memory. Every organization of workmen in the city is to be enlisted in the movement.

GOV. BOIES' re-election this year will be a great victory, but owing to the bad character of the Republican nominee it will not be a complete demonstration of his strength with the people of Iowa. It does not much help a candidate if the supporters of the other man have to hold their noses while casting their ballots.

COMMISSIONER HOLMAN does not know when the Water-works would be completed if water rates were to be reduced. Possibly posterity may enjoy better rates. The amount of money that we pay in order that posterity may have an easy time in the world or have something pretty to look at is annually enormous.

INSTEAD of embracing the opportunity to raise his record to two Democratic votes, Ambassador Van Alen went off fox-hunting and did not vote for the Democratic nominee for Mayor of Newport. It isn't likely that we shall ever get Van to the polls again save in a presidential year, when there is something in sight.

THE parliamentary episode in the House yesterday discloses the Republican plan of campaign against revenue reform. The vote of the House on the floor does not mean to fight it in debate. The real battle will be in the way of tricks and wiles, parliamentary sharp practice and guile. In other words debate will be only an incident in the grand campaign of obstruction. The protectionists have learned their lesson well. They know how to make a minority as good as a majority.

THERE is a chance that the modern idea of naval construction and warfare may be tested by an encounter between the two Brazilian fastions. Meanwhile other nations would do well to wait before spending more millions in unwieldy hulks until it can be demonstrated whether or not the money so used is not pure waste.

It may be the best policy for Congress to adjourn until the regular session next month, but if the Senate could act upon some of the President's appointments the country would be better satisfied. The Hornblower nomination particularly should be disposed of in some way, as the Supreme Court is in need of a full bench.

AS USUAL the officials responsible for the proper performance of the repairs at the City Hospital are trying to ascertain which one of them is to blame for the botched job. It does not matter. The contractor has his money, and the city is rich. The tax-payers will pay the bill and forget about it as they always do. It is only a small job, anyhow.

SYSTEM IN PUBLIC WORK.

The movement for numbering the streets running north and south, instead of designating them by names, is in the right direction. It will be infinitely more convenient to strangers and very helpful to citizens well acquainted with the streets if this suggestion is adopted.

In line with this Mr. Ferriss' other suggestion, that public improvements be carried on systematically and after a well ordered, carefully matured programme. Public business of all sorts has been conducted at haphazard. Public necessities have not been provided for in advance and too little time has been given for the thoughtful consideration of improvements.

The growth of the city is rapid and is likely to be continuous and steady in directions which are now foreseen. It is possible to anticipate future development and by wise foresight to order public work that it may be done when wanted, most efficiently and economically.

Emergency legislation is too costly and is never well considered or satisfactory, but if the municipal business is conducted with the skill without which success is impossible in private affairs it will never be necessary.

It goes without saying that if such a reform in administrative methods is to be accomplished it will be in spite of the "push" and "pull," which thrive on the lack of order and the frequent recurrence of emergencies full of jobbing pity. Petty partisanship and "practical politics" must be put aside in favor of the real interests of the city.

WHAT IS LAW?

The last attempt to bring lynchers to justice happened in Memphis when the Sheriff surrendered to the mob and was afterward indicted for complicity in the riot. The case was nolle prosequed however, because it was impossible to get a jury composed of men who would not say they disapproved of mob law.

This is very shocking. It makes the lovers of "law and order" shudder and hold up their hands in pious horror at the wickedness of their fellow-men. But why not tell the truth about the matter? Lynchings have occurred in all parts of the country for offenses against women, but no conviction was ever had. The fact is that the unwritten law, that is, that public will not written on the statute books, ordains that such offenders shall be hanged when caught, and that they must be caught without delay.

This law is not orderly and fringed with red tape, but it is the law in the essential particulars. That is, it is the popular will. We may deplore the circumstances and regret that the people do not provide more seemly methods of bringing such criminals to justice, but we cannot say that a procedure which effectively leads up to the satisfaction of the fixed will of the vast majority is really not a part of the actual and operative law of the country.

A DEPLORABLE STRIFE.

St. Louis, having a tender feeling for both New York and Chicago, and rejoicing in their prosperity as well as in her own, has regretted to observe the antagonistic spirit which has of late years grown up between those two excellent and progressive communities.

How could we possibly get along without New York, and what would become of us if Chicago were to disappear?

With the large and growing colony of American Englishmen in New York, which is so rapidly teaching us the manners and habits of the nobility of the vast and powerful and enlightened empire over which a good, fat lady presides so successfully, we have reason to feel that we shall eventually reach a state of culture and superiority which the people of no republic since the days of the Grecian States have approached. It can scarcely be doubted that to the softening influence of anglicized New York we owe the development of the Ambassador; and, indeed, we have made so much progress in our European advancement that we can to-day boast that at least one of our Ambassadors is often thought to bear a striking resemblance to that eminent Prince and statesman, Albert Edward of Wales. How can we, therefore, feel anything but pride in our Eastern metropolis, and trust that she may renew her efforts to become wholly and truly English, notwithstanding her large proportion of inferior native Americans and foreigners?

As to Chicago, where should we be without the example of her pushing commercial spirit? Her solid porcine basis is the admiration of the West. She spreads herself to the farthest suburb, and her remotest inhabitant oozes the hayseed from his hair as the sun goes down. To the average Chicagoan no other city than his has a real existence, and his astonishment at encountering a human being who "wouldn't live there" is touching. To him there have been but two events in the world's history—the fire and the Fair—and of these he will sing close up to the day when the Apache shall sit on the decaying swing bridge and view the ruins of the Palmer House. The Chicagoan is true to his town, and what has sometimes appeared to outsiders to be mere hogging has really been his natural patriotism. Let us be as the Chicagoan, and learn from him to sound the praises of our own town, our own property, our own investments.

The influence of the two cities of New York and Chicago on the country is very great. Let them, therefore, forget the past and permit the mud they have thrown to dry up and crumble away. We need them both. With Chicago push we shall get our money, and with New York polish we shall spend it like Englishmen.

OUR GRAND NAVY.

The unseaworthy character of some of the new cruisers and gunboats is generally admitted among naval experts, although there has been no official acknowledgment of the fact. The boats under suspicion are five in number, two of which have demonstrated by actual trial their unsuitability for naval purposes. These two are top-heavy, owing to blunders in design or workmanship, and this defect is exaggerated by armaments too heavy for ships of their class. And as the other three are built on similar or identical designs, it is thought that they too will have to be withdrawn from active service.

Extensive alterations are proposed in these ships in order to make them at all serviceable. They can not, in their present condition, be allowed to roam the seas with the prospect that in the first gale they will "turn turtle" and go to the bottom. The changes will cost money and the fighting strength expected when the vessels were ordered will be seriously impaired. The alterations in the ships themselves will involve a diminution in the numbers of the crews and the armament will have to be reduced to such a weight as can be carried without upsetting the top-heavy tubs. Naval men are agreed that this partial reconstruction is absolutely necessary.

Of course there is the usual recrimination among the various naval bureaus, each trying to put the blame on the others. This may be the object of a congressional investigation. But a more important consideration is the policy itself under which these experiments are being made. The question may well be asked whether it is wise to put millions in craft which at best are only experiments which may fail at critical moments when they are most needed. A strong navy may be needed, but there are too many glittering blunders in our collection of uncounted monsters.

THE affairs of the Union Pacific will demand considerable attention from Congress this winter, owing to the receivership and to the fact that the debt due the Government matures in the near future. The prospect for getting the money is very slight. In fact, it is well nigh hopeless. The managers of the concern have made it their chief duty to use mix accounts, plaster mortgage upon mortgage, tie up the original corporations with guarantees of new lines built by the parent company or acquired by trade, and other "alike schemes" known to almost impossible to ascertain the relative standing of conflicting equities and adjust the affairs of the concern without traversing some, perhaps many, maxims of morality. At the same time the chief study of the five Government directors seems to have been to do nothing to protect the interests of the people or hinder in any way the joyous work of the plunderers. The money is probably lost, but the case should be closely watched. Some rich developments may be expected which will illustrate corporation management and afford instruction for future use.

How much truth is there in Senator Vest's assertion that "the national banks of New York determined, months ago, to secure an issue of gold bonds by the Government and started a monetary panic in order to force the President to call Congress together for the purpose of issuing bonds which could be made the basis of national bank circulation?" The Senator is not in the habit of mauling, but he here charges conspiracy of the worst sort. Such assertions ought to be accompanied by proof. Can he prove it? He also declares that the panic was got up by these adventurers who tried to bulldoze the President into compliance with their wish. Talk of this kind is not worth noticing when it comes from irresponsible persons, but when a United States Senator speaks so plainly it is highly interesting.

Mrs. CLEVELAND seems not to have Queen Victoria's ambition to accumulate dogs, though she might easily have more than her majesty keeps. Though a great many canine presents are sent to the lady of the White House, she does not retain them, but forwards them to her Uncle Harmon, who has a celery farm in Michigan, and who probably finds their remains an excellent fertilizer. It would be interesting to know whether the three dogs shipped to Mrs. Cleveland by one of our valuable Consuls have further enriched Uncle Harmon's prosperous acres.

MODESTY has triumphed at last in the Hoosier state. The screens that conceal the honest Hoosier when he goes to refresh his parched esophagus are not to be removed, the decisions of the lower courts having been completely knocked out by the Supreme Court. It would have been very severe on our modest Hoosier to place him in front of a staring world every time he wanted to satisfy his thirst. He might as well have had his dining-room opened to the inspection of every passer. We are the oppressors anti-screen law been carried out, he would have been put to the expense of a disguise, and perhaps he would have had to wait until night had spread her mantle over Indiana before he ventured to start his jag. The fight has been a long one, but freedom and modesty have been vindicated, and we shall probably hear no more of pulling down Hoosier screens.

Mrs. POTTER PALMER makes the startling assertion that very few marriages could now occur if women were not able to assist in maintaining the home, and she adds that, perhaps, we are responsible for expecting men at the present stage of civilization to support their families unassisted by their wives. Here is food for thought, indeed. A silent revolution has been in progress, and we may well ask ourselves: "Where are we?" It must be remembered that revolutions never go backward, and we may further ask, if what Mrs. Palmer says is true, whether this revolution will not finally push man out completely and leave woman everywhere and in all things supreme. Is the declining and falling off of the masculine sex a reality?

In a meteorological article in a leading Kentucky journal it is announced that "the opposition of Jupiter occurs on the 17th." What will the Kentucky Colonel say to this? Gin may be well enough in some communities, but what will happen if an opposition of Jupiter to the regular Kentucky beverage is to be set up? We look for trouble on the dark and bloody ground on the 17th.

It is to be hoped that Mrs. Potter Palmer will not fail to take counsel of Miss Phoebe Cousins in the work of building up the Woman's Industrial Museum. If only the ladies will work together there is nothing that they may not accomplish.

The Denver man who has been stealing for twenty years without being discovered has real talent. His fellow-criminals will have to watch him when he reaches the pen if they expect to retain their clothing.

As Iowa doctor has been sentenced to six months in jail for trying to beat down the price of postage stamps at a post-office. Why didn't he try to get a bargain at the drug store?

The sympathizing neighbor has a nose for a nose which the latest reports make us envy. But must we stand coldly aloof when misfortune enters the home of a fellow-being?

PETTERS, the Jaff Festivities Association might tell their costly goddess to some town that hasn't one yet. Why not paint her up and advertise her in the art world?

THE Democratic party is giving the young man a chance. The next report from the House, the Rev. E. Bagby, is only 25 years old.

Pedagogic Philosophy in Holland.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.
A member of the London School Board made a strong plea for the abolition of corporal punishment in the London schools at a recent meeting of the board. He cited the case of Holland, where corporal punishment is never used to correct the peccadilloes of pupils. "Keeping in" is the usual form of school punishment in that country. This London School Director stated that the Holland plan was excellent for the reason that it punished the teacher as well as the child, and thus made the teacher anxious to maintain discipline in school hours to avoid remaining afterward with offenders. There is some philosophy in this idea, but the Londoners declined to become converted to it.

William's Hopes.

From an Exchange.
While all of the formalities at Potsdam incidental to the presentation of his credentials to the Emperor by the Hon. Theodore Kuny, United States Ambassador to Germany, were marked by the utmost cordility, a special touch of grace was lent to the occasion by the Emperor's neat allusion to the World's Fair, and his expression of the hope that it would be followed by valuable commercial results for both countries. There is every reason to expect that this hope will have a final realization when our present crude tariff system shall have been supplanted by one not conceived in a spirit of blind antagonism to trade and commerce.

Getting Used to Office-Selling.

From the Chicago Mail.
Some reformers are getting red in the face because James Roosevelt, appointed secretary of Legation at London, got the place in consideration of a $10,000 contribution to the Democratic campaign fund. If we can stand Van Alen there is no use in arguing at Roosevelt, and the latter is at any rate an American.

An Accepted Freak.

From the Chicago Mail.
William Waldorf Astor's London paper says the killing of Mayor Harrison "is one of those things we associate with America." If we had only known what an idiot Willie Astor was before he got away from us we would never have let England have him until the freak market here looked up.

Not in His Case.

From the Indianapolis Journal.
Miss Miller: "I'm true that bicycle riders soon get attached to their machines." Mr. Wheeler: "I'm sure you're right. I can fall off my machine without the least trouble."

The Good Teacher Question.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I do not fully understand the rules governing School Directors when they inquire into the private affairs of teachers or consider anything but the value of a teacher's services in the schools. Will "Normal Graduate" inform me whether or not he has any set of rules by which it is controlled? The sacredness of home and marriage should not be assailed by any body of men. If there is such a man in the board as "Normal Graduate" reads to believe perhaps he saves of the Chicago crank, and before a crime is committed the board ought to inquire into his mental condition. Has he a wife or is he some jilted bachelor, who has become soiled on account of his treatment by the ladies? Children have repeatedly said: "Mrs. so and so was the best teacher I ever had." And from a mother's observation, having and children in all grades of the public schools, I have found the competent, patient, honest, sympathetic "married or mother" teacher the true teacher. Our School Board should be composed of men who consider first, the welfare of God's little children; second, the true honest, wholesome teacher; the public's money last; and their pet hobbies or prejudices should not enter at all.

I believe that much of the dishonesty, cheating and trickery of today begins with our children in the schools. I have known of many instances of copying, cheating and dishonesty among the youngest children. On account of favoritism shown to many of our teachers by their political friends some method of cheating must be adopted in order to compete with a competent teacher. The race for promotion, discipline and instruction, if you can set them, and they will discountenance all dishonesty in the child and fit it to become an honest workman and a true citizen. Tracing maps with a trace paper is a very slight offense, but just as dishonest as stealing a pin. Are our teachers so ignorant as not to discover these little childish tricks, or don't they care, so the map is drawn, as to the teacher?

"Get that example or go to the principal." Is one method of teaching arithmetic. We have and pray for the day when the good old time teacher will go to the board, analyze and make an example so clear to the child that the child will not be obliged to sit up late with the child and do that which a teacher is paid to do. Some of our teachers do their work nobly and grandly, faithfully, but many merely assign lessons and hear them read.

Sit our schools, dismiss the unskilled, lazy, incompetent teacher and employ the best you can get. If she is married, so much the better. If she is qualified to put the interest of the child at heart and will hold the dropping of a pencil or book is extremely offensive. What is the reason? Probably out to a party or sat up late with a prospective husband, no time to study a plan work for the next day; so the "little map" has to suffer.

If what Normal Graduate says is true, and she has produced witnesses, surely the voters of St. Louis need reminding for putting such a man as she describes into the most responsible position in our free America, who will allow themselves to commit such an outrage as the one perpetrated on those twenty-eight defenseless married women. Husband, brothers, fathers, arise and protect our school children from designing politicians! Every hour that a qualified teacher is detained is an absolute wrong to our children.

Trades and labor assemblies, unions of all kinds, men of character, go to the polls, forget whether you be Democrat or Republican and vote for the man who declares himself in favor of competent, faithful, honest teachers, married or single.

A Mother.

Scoring Murphy Again.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The seeming partiality of Street Commissioner Murphy in his orders for relaying sidewalks is disgusting. Many sidewalks are taken up when it is not necessary. But many are condemned by his inspectors and their inspection ignored. For instance, take the sidewalk on the west side of Channing avenue, between Pine and Chestnut streets. There is scarcely a foot of pavement between the tree boxes and the dirt walk. In wet weather it is quite muddy. This sidewalk was condemned over a year ago, but Murphy has ignored it and has caused other sidewalks to be taken up and relaid in the neighborhood that were in excellent condition. Can it be possible his affection for the push still clings to him?

The Sweeping Nuisance.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Why is it that the Franklin avenue storekeepers are making such a nuisance of themselves in allowing their employees to sweep their sidewalks at such late hour in the morning? Why can it not be done earlier and save the majority of pedestrians, who walk down about 8 a. m. from dust and dirt which they so persistently sweep on you, regardless of your clothes? This certainly ought to be stopped.

Police Employment.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
It seems very strange that the Mayor can give ex-Priest Slattery ample protection and cannot provide protection for the citizens of St. Louis that help to support him. If he would do this there would be less people held up. Of course the highwaymen can have everything their own way while the patrolmen are obliged to protect this man.

Another Odd Beloved.

Another fancy bodice has made its appearance before the bodice-laden community. It happens to be a pretty one, which cannot be said of all its predecessors. It is of beltonnet cordon, gathered at the neck and waist to form a full, loose front. The tight-fitting sides are covered with Irish point lace to simulate a jacket. The lace is also draped in revers, which fall from the shoulder seams, and a deep ruffle finishes the full sleeves. To wear with a black lace or silk skirt this bodice may be made of scarlet surah with the jacket and revers in black Spanish lace.

A Pretty Bodice.

What is known as the riding habit bodice is always the fashion. The model is made of rough green serge, 32 inches wide, 15.50 yard, braided in black. The braid is machine work that any operator could do after stamping. This bodice is suitable for any material. The tails in the back would be cut shorter for a tall, long-waisted figure. The front is pointed and buttoned, black bone buttons.

WILL PURSUE HIM.

Mrs. E. E. McClintock Will Revenge Herself on Her Recalcitrant Husband.

HE IS DETERMINED THAT HE SHALL NEVER MARRY MRS. THOMPSON.

She Says That If She Meets Him She May Kill Him—How He Sent Her Kisses While He Was With Mrs. Thompson at Whiting, Kan.

E. E. McClintock, the dashing railroad man, who abandoned his wife in this city for the beautiful Mrs. Marguerite Thompson, erstwhile of Denver, Colo.; Whiting, Kan., and Sedalia, Mo., will have to dodge a warrant or pay the $50 he owes for Mrs. McClintock's board at 1316 Chestnut avenue. The deserted wife told a Post-Dispatch reporter to-day that a warrant would be issued for his arrest on that score. She has no money and cannot well pursue him, but she can put the officers of the law after him and she declared that she intended to do all she could to bring him to grief.

She was asked if she intended to institute proceedings for divorce against him and said: "No, I will do no such thing. That might please him too much. He shan't have a divorce, and he shan't never marry that woman. That is one thing I can keep him from doing. I know he wouldn't dare to marry her as the matter now stands. I am determined to find him no matter where he goes."

"What would you do if you should find him?" "I could kill him. I could do that easily enough," replied the little woman, with a flash of her eyes. "We will see what comes of it all. I should not be surprised if he should come back now since the publication of that article in the Post-Dispatch yesterday. No, sir, I would not be a bit surprised if he should come to that door right now."

"And if he should would you not be ready to forgive him and forget the past?" "Never. I'll never forgive him in the world. He'll find that out."

HOW SHE SENT KISSES. Mrs. McClintock then exhibited a stack of letters she had received from her husband since he left her. She declined to allow them to be published, but she read scraps of them and they were of a very ardent nature. "He is one," she said, "written from Lamont."

Mrs. Thompson was with him then and perhaps she was attracted to him when he wrote this love letter to his darling wife. You see here he promises to send me some money as soon as he could get the $1,000. I received no money from him at all. All those kisses for me. You see all those marks he put at the bottom of his letter. That is a way he had of sending kisses."

McClintock had made about a hundred dots on the paper, and when she read a ring and written below, "All kisses for my darling wife." Mrs. McClintock sarcastically remarked that that was very sweet in him under the circumstances and when he was remembered that when he made those kisses dots he had deserted her and was with the woman who had supplanted her in his affections. The other letters were on the same order, all of them promising that he had been unfortunate and was "hard up."

In each case he said he longed for the time when he could return to St. Louis and be with his loving wife. Mrs. McClintock's eyes were full of tears as she read his letters and she will assist her in ferreting out her recalcitrant spouse. But she has not yet interested to the tune of $50, which is also quite an incentive to activity. The lady was down town to-day and consulted a lawyer with a view to getting out a warrant for McClintock's arrest.

SHARPER HILL

Harry Watkins Abandons His Wife for Rose Murphy.

THE WIFE FINDS THE PAIR AND MAKES TROUBLE.

Saw Her Husband at the Window of 1800 Chestnut Street and Entered House - Chased Out by Miss Murphy, Who Wielded a Knife.

The afternoon about 1 o'clock a stylishly dressed and attractive brunette called at the Four Courts and wanted a warrant against her husband for another adultery or wife abandonment.

She said her name was Mrs. Watkins and that she resided with her mother at 1709 O'Fallon street. Her husband is a bricklayer. His name is Harry Watkins and she has had trouble after they were married three years ago, and alleged that Watkins had been about a year ago that she knew he was alienated from her by another woman.

Recently she and her husband effected a reconciliation and they were living happily until about a week ago, when, according to Mrs. Watkins, her husband again left her and resumed his former career away from home.

Mrs. Watkins became infuriated at this second abandonment, and after waiting in vain until last evening for her alleged errand to return she decided to make a hunt for him on her own hook.

She said she had been living with a woman named Rose Murphy Chestnut street, who visited that locality streets watching the houses. At last she saw the face of her husband in the third story window of the house, 1800 Chestnut street, and she bravely entered the place.

Her husband lying on a bed, she said, she grabbed him and would have given him a good drubbing but for the appearance of the woman, who was holding a knife.

She said that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy.

She said that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy.

She said that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy.

She said that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy.

She said that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy.

She said that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy, and that she saw her husband and the woman, who she said was a woman named Rose Murphy.

HOW IS THIS? WE HAVE CAUSE TO BE HAPPY.

Here Is An Example in Arithmetical Progression! Certain clothiers are tooting about the big things they did at the auction sale of Naumberg, Kraus, Lauer & Co., of New York. Figuring up their wild claims of greatness we discover that the grand total of garments alleged to have been purchased is 23,840! Great Caesar! The goods could not have been shipped until Thursday! Did they come by telegraph? We attended that auction ourselves. All we bought was 600 Garments—a mere bagatelle.

TROUBLES SIOUX.

About 100 of Them Under Arrest as Renegades.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., Nov. 2.—About 100 Lower Brule Sioux are under arrest at Lower Brule Agency. They were sent to their reservation some time ago, some way up the Missouri, but would not stay there, and took up quarters at the abandoned Fort Randall Post and occupied the empty houses. Two Indian police were sent after them, but they refused to come in. Then twenty police were sent with the two white men from the agency. The Sioux want to go farther south.

Just Unlike Jesse's Man, He Found Much Wealth.

BUTTE CITY, Mont., Nov. 3.—A Farmer named J. A. McConnell killed thirty-one chickens a pro rata of gold nuggets, the total amount gathered from the thirty-one being $27.55. He purchased more chickens and killed one yesterday and found in its crop $2.50. If the chickens hold out, Mr. McConnell will become a millionaire.

When Nature

Needs assistance it may be best to render it promptly, but one should remember to use even the most perfect remedies only when needed. The best and most simple and gentle remedy is the syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

MURDER SUSPECTED.

Sisters of a Dead Brother Do Not Believe He Suicided.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2.—The burial of Harry Fink, who was supposed to have suicided by taking morphine, took place yesterday at the family residence to-day. He was the pet and pride of five brothers and four sisters. The oldest brother, John, took unto himself a wife some time ago, and since then there have been family differences. A younger brother, Will, created a scene at the funeral services yesterday. He insisted that a priest should be present, and when told a priest could not be secured because his brother was a suicide, he cried out there was no proof of that. He was only voicing the opinion of his sisters, who had suspiciously scrutinized the damaged features of the deceased. They think he was murdered. The family is an eminently respectable one.

St. Louis Preachers.

From an Exchange.

St. Louis newspapers must be very blind to what is good. Not a week has passed in years that has not seen some choice pulp literature in their columns from Beecher, Spurgeon or Talmage—all of which are well worth space. If those same papers had been at St. George's Church, Olive street, last Sunday and heard the sermon by Dr. Holland, the rector of St. George's Church, either of them would have seen at home what they buy from abroad, equally as good and a class of literature that will benefit the world and dignity any columns. Any of the three great duties there would find it advantageous to take the sermons to run until Christmas and use them as they appear. Sunday sermons are sent out as choiced syndicate matter. By some means these sermons should be put in the hands of the general public for the good they will do instead of being confined to the small number who can get in the little church and hear them.

New York, Nov. 2.—The suit of Alexander Stewart against Henry Hilton was dismissed yesterday by Chief Justice Daly of the court of Common Pleas, the Justice holding that Stewart did not establish relationship. Stewart was a claimant for part of the estate of A. T. Stewart.

For steady nerves and good sleep use Bromo-Belzer. Contains no Anti-Pyrine.

FOUR HORSES CREMATED.—Fire broke out in the stable of John James at 3333 Oregon avenue last night, destroying four horses, valued at $500, and $150 worth of feed and harness.

SEPARATE COACH LAW

Will Be Fought in Kentucky by an Association of Colored People.

OWENSBORO, Ky., Nov. 2.—The separate coach law in Kentucky will be fought by an association of colored people in the State and the constitutionality of the law tested thoroughly.

On the advice of Attorney John Feland, Rev. W. H. Anderson bought tickets from Evansville, Ind., to Madisonville, Ky., for himself and wife. They took seats in the rear of the ladies' coach and presented their tickets, which were accepted. When they reached the Kentucky line, however, the conductor told them they would have to move into the colored coach. This they refused to do and were put out of the train.

Suit was entered in the United States Court for $15,000 damages. The claim set up is that the law is unconstitutional and that the coaches for the colored people are far inferior to the others.

German Military Bands.

The German Cavalry and Infantry Bands that have been playing in the German village at the World's Fair were greeted at Music Hall last evening by an enormous audience. The members being army recruits are necessarily not the finished artists that have made the Gilmore and Sousa organizations famous. The Infantry Band is by far the larger, though the Cavalry Band, composed altogether of brass, gives more satisfaction, as it is better balanced and the technique surer. An interesting feature was a fanfare of ancient trumpets by the Cavalry division. Both bands play the familiar German songs and the Strauss waltzes in a stirring manner. The bands will be here for the rest of the week.

He Alarmed Her.

Louis Storr, who has been separated from his wife since last April, called on her last evening for the first time since then, at 3007 Franklin avenue. It is said he was intoxicated and caused considerable uneasiness by drawing a revolver. He was induced to leave the neighborhood, and Mrs. Storr asked the Third District police to protect her.
